Our volunteer firefighters Volunteers with a big heart

Volunteer firefighters are professionals who practice their profession on a part-time, usually on-call basis. If they sometimes work in the shadow of their full-time colleagues, their contribution to public safety still plays a vital role in society. In fact, being a volunteer firefighter is not always easy; time must be consecrated to a principal source of income while remaining completely available for when an emergency arises.

There is no doubt that volunteer firemen share certain characteristics with other part-time jobs, particularly sporadic, on call work. This, however, is where comparisons come to an end. The selection process of candidates, though different from that of full-time firefighters, is still very rigorous which means the population is in good hands. Not everyone can become a volunteer firefighter — basic training is the same as it is for their full time colleagues. It is also possible to specialize and some can possess highly specific skills.

What is surprising about this profession is that it includes people from very different trades and professions, who have in common a highly developed sense of duty and altruism to the point of putting their own lives in danger. They also have an extremely high level of physical fitness. Volunteer firefighters are found mostly in lightly populated municipalities or in a grouping of municipalities covering a large area.

Our paramedics Here to save lives

Paramedics play a key role in our healthcare system. Their numerous interventions can mean the difference between life and death.

These professionals must have exemplary composure and be well-balanced both mentally and psychologically. Here's a small insight into a profession where everything happens rapidly:

Every time paramedics are called to help someone in need of emergency medical care, they never know in exactly what state they will find their patients. Some scenes would make your blood run cold.

A paramedic's great strength resides in his or her ability to make rapid decisions while considering a multitude of different factors, depending on the context. Every gesture must be made with care and follow certain rules.

Over the years, paramedics have had to offer more and more advanced emergency medical care. Before, members of this profession were called ambulance men and did not possess the same degree of expertise as the paramedics of today. Now, these professionals are authorized to carry out various medical procedures, such as providing basic trauma care and administering certain medications.

"Specialized" or "advanced level" paramedics can be found working in some Canadian provinces. Among other procedures, they can provide advanced respiratory assistance and use electrocardiograms. In short, these front-line professionals work in conjunction with doctors and nurses more than ever before.

Our police officers Here to protect the entire community

The police are an essential part of public security services. Unfortunately, some people have little respect for them. It is, however, a difficult and dangerous profession that requires nerves of steel and exemplary self-control. Even though a police officer's main role is to represent law and order within society, their work also involves other, underlying roles.

Police officers are in constant contact with that which is truly complex and unpredictable: The human being. Their work brings them into contact with the best and the worst. If good physical condition is often among the hiring criterion, their most important qualities include an affinity for human relations, a high level of self-discipline, public-spiritedness, politeness and a capacity for empathy.

Monotony is not a part of the job. Those who work in this profession are literally in the line of fire. Their work is often associated with handing out traffic tickets, which really represents only a tiny fraction of their job. If this part of their work sometimes makes them appear less sympathetic in the public eye, we should never lose sight of the fact that they sometimes save lives while putting their own in danger.

The police's role in the community has greatly evolved over the decades. In addition to enforcing the law, they work in prevention, public relations and the upholding of commitment to the local community.

Lifesaving techniques you should know in an emergency

When disaster strikes unannounced, paramedics may not be able to respond to a medical emergency with their usual promptness. Knowing these basic techniques could very well save the life of someone you love.

CPR
Do you know what to do if someone stops breathing? What about if their ter five Heimlich thrusts. Alternate between back blows and Heimlich thrusts until the object becomes dislodged or the person stops breathing. If the latter occurs, start administering CPR.

Safely stop bleeding
Apply pressure to the wound with gauze (a shirt or towel will do in a pinch) and keep it elevated above heart level.

heart stops? Receiving cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) can triple a person's chances of surviving cardiac arrest. This is because CPR keeps vital organs oxygenated until the heart starts to beat again.

Back-blows for choking
The Red Cross now recommends administering back blows before attempting the Heimlich manoeuvre. If someone is choking, have them stand in a slightly bent-over position and deliver five hard blows with the heel of your hand between their shoulder blades. This should dislodge any object obstructing the airways, but in the event that it fails, the next step is to adminis-

The pressure alone should be enough to start the clotting process. Never apply a tourniquet to stop bleeding; this technique is only used when a limb can no longer be saved and will need to be amputated.

First aid
Basic first aid training will allow you to learn all the above skills and more. While taking a course delivered in your community by a reputable organization — YMCA, Red Cross, St. John Ambulance, etc. — is a great way to learn, very affordable (or even free) educational material can also be found online.
